NEW CHARTER A LIVE ISSUE

Commission Plan Much Discussed.

The Advocates and Opponents Are As Busy As Bees—Circulation of Petition of Misleading Nature Arouses Advocates to Action—Taxes Will Not Be Increased But Will Be Decreased by New Charter.

The topic of interest in Greensboro at present is the Commission Plan of government and with the election only ten days off the advocates and opponents are getting busy. It is more than probable that a mass meeting will be held Monday night at which the issues involved can be discussed fully and freely. Those who are advocating the plan state that they are anxious to learn the several objections made, believing that when the matters are fully explained many of the objections will cease to exist and the opponents will become advocates of the measure.

In a two column article elsewhere Mr. E. E. Bain and Mr. H. L. Coble warn people to read the charter before voting. Mr. Bain has not yet accepted the proposition of Mr. L. J. Brandt to hold a mass meeting on Monday night at which the advantages and disadvantages the good and the bad, in the proposed new charter, but it is hoped by those who are advocating the measure that such an arrangement will be made. The fundamental principle of the plan is that the city government will be "of the people, by the people and for the people" and if the voters of the city, the advocates say, after hearing the issues involved fairly and squarely discussed, decide they do not want the commission plan then they will be content, feeling that the will of the people is and should be law. However, it is urged that every citizen inform himself fully as to the merits of the plan before committing himself as against it as a clear explanation of a certain section may remove his objections. Copies of the charter can be had by applying at the city hall or the Chamber of Commerce office.

The advocates of the plan were considerably aroused yesterday afternoon when some unknown party or parties circulated on the streets a sheet containing figures and reading similar to those gotten up by the statistical committee of the Chamber of Commerce and purporting to be sent out by that committee. Across the head was printed in red letters: "Vote against the Commission Form of Government for Greensboro and keep on growing!!" The Chamber of Commerce had nothing whatsoever to do with this circular and those who receive these circulars should remember that the proposed plan was drafted by a committee from that organization, which alone is enough to convince a person that the Chamber is not opposed to the plan. It should also be stated in this connection that with the printing of the pamphlet containing the law the connection of the Chamber of Commerce as an organization with the law ceased. The organization will have nothing more to do with it, but the membership, or the majority of the members, are in hearty sympathy with the measure. The circulation of this petition will cause the advocates to awake to the fact that every means will be used by the opposition to kill the law.

One of the points discussed at length by some of the opponents has been that taxes will be increased. This is not so as a perusal of the sections pertaining to taxes will show. It should be stated that through an oversight the words "and school" were left out in two places when the charter was published, but it was amended before going to the legislature to read as follows, the amendment being in black:

"Sec. 67. That for the purpose of raising revenue for defraying the expenses incident to the proper government of the city, the Board of Commissioners of the city of Greensboro shall have the power, and they are hereby authorized, to levy and collect, for general and school purposes, an annual ad valorem tax on all real and personal property within the corporate limits of said city, and on all personal property, including money on hand and solvent credits owned by residents of said city, and on all other property subject to an ad valorem tax under the laws of the State of North Carolina, not exempt from taxation by the constitution and laws of the said state, of and at the rate of not exceeding eighty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation of said property, and for the purpose of paying interest on municipal bonds said board shall levy and collect an annual ad valorem tax on all property subject to taxation, as hereinbefore provided, of not more than fifty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation of said property. The term "real property," as used in this act, shall be construed to mean the same as defined in Section 2857 of the Revisal of 1905, and the term "personal property," as used in this act, shall be construed to mean all property which is not real.

* * * *

"Sec. 68. Said board may also levy, and collect for general and school purposes, a poll tax not exceeding one dollar and eighty cents, and for the purpose of paying interest on the municipal bonds of said city a poll tax not exceeding one dollar and twenty cents, said poll tax to be levied on the taxable polls of all male persons who may be residents of the city on the first day of June of each year."

It will be seen from the above that the tax will be $1.30 on the $100 valuation and $3.00 on the poll. This includes general, school and special taxes for bond interest. Section 24 prescribes the amount to be raised for schools, but the amendment to the above sections include in the tax for general purposes the school tax also. So instead of an increase of taxes there will be a decrease of 50 cents on each poll, while the ad valorem tax will remain as at present.

FOR MR. TAYLOR.

Chamber of Commerce Extends Thanks For His Services to City in Past.

At yesterday's meeting of the directors the following resolutions were adopted:

Be it resolved by the board of directors of the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce.

That upon the occasion of his leaving Greensboro for the purpose of accepting the presidency of a large corporation in another city, we wish to bear public testimony to the worth and public services of Mr. Zebulon V. Taylor.

As mayor of Greensboro Mr. Taylor guided the affairs of our municipality with sagacity, vigor and broad minded intelligence; largely through his efforts Greensboro has today a public service company second to none in the state: while as a private citizen he ever earned and kept the respect and good will of our people as a whole and the warmest regard of an ever widening circle of friends.

We therefore wish publicly to thank Mr. Taylor for his public services, to express our regret at his leaving our city and to commend him to those among whom he has now cast his lot.

UNITED STATES COURT.

Trial of Case of Chesterfield Manufacturing Company vs. Leota Cotton Mills Still In Progress.

The case of Chesterfield Manufacturing Company vs. Leota Cotton Mills, which began in United States court Tuesday morning, is still being aired and the evidence will hardly be concluded today. The suit is regarding the proper or improper dyeing of certain cotton or cotton goods. A considerable amount of time yesterday was taken up in argument as to the admission of evidence and the testimony of expert witnesses.

Each side is ably represented and the argument will likely last a day after the evidence is all introduced.

READ CHARTER AND THEN VOTE

The Advice of Messrs. Bain And Coble.

In Lengthy Communication They Set Forth Reasons Why Commission Form of Government Is Not Practical—Say It Would Be Too Expensive and Would Centralize Power on Few Men.

To the Voters of Greensboro:

On Tuesday, Febraury 7, you will have the opportunity of voting either to adopt or reject a proposed charter, which, if adopted, will give to Greensboro a government by commission. The legislature has provided that a majority of the votes cast shall determine whether or not the bill will become the city's charter. This being true, the duty devolves upon every man of the city to register within the next ten days and then to carefully study the proposed charter.

We submit that no man should vote for the bill merely because it provides for a government by commission. There are as many kinds of commission government as of any other class, and the new charter contains many other things than those sections which provide for the election of three commissioners. We recommend a careful study of the charter by our people. It does not consist of the nine pages of argumentative matter and criticism of the present government found in the first of the pamphlet, but of the remaining 56 pages.

We have no criticism to offer against the Chamber of Commerce or the men who drafted the charter; that organization and the committee are composed of men or honor. We do think, however, that they should not have taken the city's money and used it to print only one side of the matter, as was done in placing before the charter itself an address in its behalf.

The undersigned do not wish to be understood as wholly opposed to all forms of commission government. There are many features in the plan that appeal to us, and had a more modified form been offered to the people, we would no doubt be in favor of it. That question is not now before us, however, but we have only the option of taking the bill as passed by the legislature, and accepting it as our charter, or leaving the city government as it is. As between these alternatives, we are forced to the conclusion that the mode of government under which we now live is the better by far.

Even in its more modified forms, the commission plan is scarcely more than an experiment. Good financial showings have been made in some cases, but it does not necessarily follow that the town that spends the least money on public improvement (and the most on salaries) is the best governed town. That there are two sides to the question of commission government is evidenced by the fact that in those cities where it has been adopted it has been criticisd and condemned, and the officials censured and abused, just as they are in towns under the old plan.

Plan Too Expensive For Greensboro.

We respectfully submit that the revenue of Greensboro is not great enough to justify the large number of paid officers that will be necessitated by the new plan.

For the fiscal year ending May 1, 1910, the total income of the City of Greensboro from all sources was $150,768.37. This includes $10,000 paid by the county to the city school fund. The remainder of the sum was derived from property taxes, special privilege and license taxes, cemetery, rent of opera house and market, costs collected in Municipal court and amounts received from building inspection, meat and milk inspection and sanitation departments. The total amount expended for the same period was $143,507.99.

Of the amount expended $40,170 was for interest on bonds; $31,957.46 for schools; $10,140.82 for police protection; $7,601.38 for street lighting; $3,000 annual donation to public library; city hall expenses, $1,328.67; and $6,028.36 for cemetery; making a total of slightly more than $100,000. These expenses could not be reduced to any appreciable extent by commissioners, or any one else, unless our schools are closed, our streets left dark, our city left without police protection, our library and cemetery left uncared for, and our municipal building left without heat, lights and janitor service.

This would leave only $50,000 for the commissioners to pay themselves, their employes and spend in other ways. Let us see how that remaining $50,000 was spent the year ending last May: For street maintenance and street building, $13,129.94; fire department, $12,806.35 (including some permanent improvements); city hall repairs, $2,234.51 (including fire escapes); salaries and fees, $8,126.72; board of health, $2,218.65; miscellaneous, $2,857.01. leaving a balance in the treasury of $9,108.50.

At the lowest possible estimate, we believe the salaries of the commissioners, their clerks and assistants would be as much as $15,000; the fire department, if properly maintained, with volunteer men, will cost $10,000. Thus, after the salaries are paid and the fire department provided for, we will be paying men $15,000 to spend $25,000 for us.

The salaries of the three commissioners will be $7,400; it will be necessary in addition to these to have an assistant tax collector, city clerk, bookkeeper, judge of the Municipal court, city attorney, street foremen, other clerks and minor officials. Thus, we think, $15,000 for salaries a low estimate. From this some idea can be gathered of the expensive machinery of the government by commission. The offices are political and each man will want to reward as many of his supporters as possible with jobs. And the commissioners can create as many jobs as they choose! How greatly different from a board of aldermen who run from a motive of public spirit and have no friends to reward.

It will be argued that our income will annually be increased. True, but at the same time the number of school children will increase, more policemen will be needed, and already more bonds have been issued and interest on these will have to be paid. Necessary expenses will increase all along the line, so that the net amount for the commissioners to expend in their discretion will not be increased to any appreciable extent.

We wish to call attention to the fact that the cities cited as illustrations of the beneficent results of municipal administration by commission ,are cities much larger than Greensboro, and cities in which before the commission plan was adopted the administration had not been economical.

Commissioners Are Given Too Much Power.

The provision that one set of men will have both the making and enforcing of the laws, and at the same time be the chief administrative officers of the city is, in our opinion, unwise.

We think it would be a serious mistake to make one man the mayor, tax collector and chief disbursing agent of the city. It means that one man would have sole and absolute control over all city funds, subject of course to a few checks such as a treasurer, but these, too, would be from among the commissioners. The three men, or really two of them, would have all funds in their own grasp. We know of no other political body where such conditions exist. In county government the sheriff collects the taxes, pays them to the treasurer, accounts to the commissioners, and while the money is paid out only upon order of the commissioners, it is never in their hands.

Instead of being a check or things of value, we believe the intiative, referendum and recall to be cumbersome, expensive and impractical. They are populistic in tendency and a farce in practice. The recall would be used as a means of threatening and harrassing good men who attempted to do their duty, and if a check on bad ones would be expensive, tedious and full of delays. If the commissioners were elected by the people and there was a board of aldermen, who could remove the commissioners, for cause, it would be much more practical.

While the commissioners might be elected by a direct vote of the people, we think there should still be a board of aldermen, which would meet monthly, have general supervision of the city's affairs and make its ordinances—granting that we need commissioners at all. They would at least serve as a finance committee and ascertain where the people's money goes.

The Chamber of Commerce would at one mighty sweep carry away the board of aldermen, street commission, water and light commission, fire commisson, cemetery commission, school board and a few other officers and give the power of about 25 men to three commissioners.

We do not believe that men with especial fitness for the work will give up positions to get into a political fight. Their campaign will cost several hundred dollars, and they will at all times be in danger of losing their places if they stand by their convictions when public sentiment is against them. The kind of men most desired will not be candidates.

The City's Schools.

By the terms of the charter any policeman, street overseer or janitor, if elected by the commissioners, may upon being discharged by a commissioner appeal to the board, but if a school teacher is discharged by the superintendent she has no right of appeal. The superintendent is a law unto himself; he can discharge any principal, teacher or employe in the school department or make any other arbitrary ruling he chooses to make, and no one can appeal from it to the commissioners or to any one else.

The three commissioners will elect the superintendent. This makes it not only probable but altogether likely that the commissioners will elect that man who supported them when candidates, regardless of whether he is the best man or not. It will thus put the schools into politics. It is the natural and logical result of such a system.

We have not tried to point out all of the objections to the proposed measure. A reading of the bill will suggest many other features that are open to question. To this end we urge upon the people the suggestion, "Read Before Voting."

Editor Telegram:

The proposed charter I see places three men as board of directors for the city instead of seven as we now have, the three to be paid seventy-four hundred dollars. We now pay the seven two hundred dollars. No one man even by giving all of his time can do the work of any one of the three departments. So he will have to hire men and, if good men, must pay good wages. There never has been any trouble in getting the very best of our citizens to serve as aldermen, nor has there been any trouble in their getting the very best of our business men to serve as advisors on the two commissions they have had in operation for years, two on each without pay as advisors the third one paid and he to attend to the work. In this you have three men chosen because of their fitness for the work they have charge of and what the aldermen have done in these two departments of work they can do in every other one. The city has need of no experiment about this kind of assignment of work in the hands of three competent men. It has shown for itself for years. Greensboro ought to feel proud of her cemetery and waterworks.

HOME & SCHOOL COUNCIL MEETS

First Session Held Yesterday Afternoon.

Mothers and Teachers Have Most Helpful Discussion—Committee Appointed to Outline Plan of Work—Mrs. W. I. Underwood Elected Librarian—Recent Gift From After School Club of America Admired.

Yesterday afternoon the Home and School Council, organized some weeks ago as the result of interest aroused by the After School Club of America, held its first regular meeting. The earnestness with which these teachers and mothers met together and entered into the discussion of child-study plans, foretokens good results to home and school alike. A general and informal expression of opinion was heard regarding the benefit each individual member has received, and is receiving, through her After School Club enrollment. All present were heartily agreed that the After School Club of America is an organization which is unquestionably doing the greatest practical good.

A committee was appointed to outline a definite program for the council's work. At a called meeting to be held two weeks from now this committee will report.

Any mother or teacher in Greensboro who is interested in children training and welfare may become a member of the council by paying the small sum of 25c. each year.

A most admirably selected library, comprising the very best books on Child Study. Psychology, Crafts and Sports and Kindergartening, was recently donated to the Greensboro Home and School Council by the After School Club of America. This was seen for the first time yesterday afternoon, and many were the expressions of delight and appreciation heard when the mothers examined these books, and the secretary instructed to convey a hearty note of thanks to the generous donors.

Mrs. W. I. Underwood was elected librarian. Many other important matters of the councils' proposed work were taken up which will be made known later.

The After School Club is not a club in the ordinary sense as there are no meetings held, and the unit of effort is the mother and the young folks in the home. Many useful and valuable organizations, however, such as Home and School Associations (like the one recently formed here in Greensboro) Children's Story Telling Clubs, Junior Civic Leagues, etc., grow out of the After School Club movement and receive through its channels all needed helps and suggestions.

It is, in fact, a great home educational clearing house, taking the findings of modern child-study specialists in matters relating to home education, books and reading, the rearing and training of children, and getting this information into the homes and schools where it can be made of actual immediate use.

All business men, doctors, lawyers, bankers, have their organizations which meet every year and discuss the ways and means of helping their profession or business; and certainly when it comes to what has been justly called the greatest business in the world—that of "making men and women out of raw material"—it must be admitted that a home educational clearing house if of inestimable value.

The After School Club of America has passed the experimental stage. The movement is not a theory, it has been successfully tried out and hundreds of members throughout the United States are today reaping the benefits of this unique educational organization which has probably accomplished more practical good in these few years of its existence than any other educational organization of this country. This is because of the splendid business management back of high and feasible educational ideas. Dr. Hamilton Wright Mabie is one of the organizers. His literary reputation is well known, and he is also considered one of the most practical educators of this generation, and the After School Club is based on his knowledge of the daily needs of the child. Associated with Dr. Mabie in the construction of the child's library were such prominent men as Henry Van.

CHINESE GIRL BRAVES NEW LAND TO BECOME NURSE

She is of Manchu Race, Long Rulers of Her Country—Bewildered by New York.

New York Press.

Hsui Lan Pai, a Manchu girl whose race for 400 years has controlled the Chinese Government, arived here yesterday on the Laurentic to study medicine in the nurses' training school connected with Johns Hopkins University. Although she is only 18 years old and cannot speak English, Miss Pai is willing to work two years or more in the university so she can return to China and become a nurse and teacher.

With her is Dr. Yamei Kin, the foremost woman physician in China, and head of the Women's Medical Department of Northern China and of the Training School for Nurses in Tien Tsin. Dr. Kin is a graduate of the Women's Medical College Infirmary of New York, now run in connection with Cornell University, and she frequently has visited this country. She is enthusiastic about American methods of teaching medicine, and it was she who persuaded Miss Pai's father to let the girl come to the United States.

New York was a revelation to the Manchu girl, and through Dr. Kin she admitted her astonishment last night in the Hotel Martha Washington. Although well educated and a traveler in her own country, Miss Pai confessed the rattle and bang, the big buildings and the glitter of lights along Broadway were "something different."

"Very fine, very wonderful," she repeated in Chinese to Dr. Kin, shaking her head and smiling. But she would not go into detail because she said she could not compare "American cities with our cities."

"She says," interpreted Dr. Kin, "that China and America are so different that she is confused and can't put in words the strange impression New York has made on her."

Miss Pai was reticent on the subject of woman suffrage, also, saying she "hadn't thought of it," but Dr. Kin, who has studied conditions here said:

"American women have almost everything they desire. Why do they seek suffrage? I don't think they are sincere in asking for it. Your women who are doing national work, who really are helping your race and who are bravely forgetful of self, are not supporting such a movement. I believe in woman's rights, and in better conditions for women, but truly it seems to me the women who are the most prominent agitators of the suffrage cause are the women who have no serious life work to do, and who are talking to kill weary time."

Dr. Kin explained the double purpose of her visit to this country. After Miss Pai has been placed in school to learn English the physician will remain here two months, during which she plans to lecture and to study American hispital conditions.

Miss Pai laughed when told the story that she had brought six trunks filled with gorgeous Chinese dresses. One small trunk contains all her belongings, and although her dresses now are either Manchu or Chinese, Dr. Kin will see that she is fitted in gowns fashionable here.

"I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart," wrote C. B. Rader, of Lewisburg, W. Va., "for the wonderful double benefit I got from Electric Bitters, in curing me of both a severe case of stomach trouble and of rheumatism, from which I had been an almost helpless sufferer for ten years. It suited my case as though made just for me." For dyspepsia, indigestion, jaundice and to rid the system of kidney poisons that cause rheumatism, Electric Bitters has no equal. Try them. FOLEY'S KIDNEY PILLS

Are tonic in action, quick in results. A special medicine for all kidney and bladder disorders. Mary C. Abbott, Wolfeboro, N. H., says: "I was afflicted with a bad case of rheumatism, due to uric acid that my kidneys failed to clear out of my blood. I was so lame in my feet, joints, and back that it was agony for me to step. I used Foley's Kidney Pills for three days when I was able to get up and move about and the pains were all gone. This great change in condition I owe to Foley's Kidney Pills and recommend them to anyone suffering as I have." Howard Gardner.

"Disease of the nostril.," replied the student.

WEB OF THE SPIDER.

Thousands of Strands In Each of Its Silky Threads.

For a long time the web of the spider was supposed to be a simple strand of wavy silk, but later it was found that such was far from being the case.

Under the microscope we can get at the secret of the spinning very nicely We see that there are either four or six teats on the spider near the lower part of the abdomen, almost exactly similar to the teats of a cow. From these issue four or six strands, as the case may be. But these strands themselves are not simple, but are composed of at least a thousand fibers each, for it has been proved that in each teat there is a sieve of at least a thousand holes, through which the silky matter is strained. Thus we see that, fine as is a spider's web, it is yet composed of from 4,000 to 6,000 fibers. Leuwenhoeck states that it would take at least 4,000,000 of the completed threads to make a thread as strong as a silk thread of the size of a hair.

As to the color of the thread, our ordinary spiders spin one of a uniform gray color. But in the riotous tropics there are found spiders that spin varicolored webs. One particularly produces red, yellow and black threads, which it binds together with a pleasing color effect.

In the thread of the spider lies dormant a great industry once it is properly studied.—Popular Magazine.

A RELIABLE COUGH MEDICINE

Is a valuable friend. Foley's Honey and Tar fulfils this condition exactly. Mrs. Charles Kline, N. 8th St., Easton, Pa., states: "Several members of my family have been cured of bad coughs and colds by the use of Foley's Honey and Tar and I am never without a bottle in the house. It soothes and relieves the irritation in the throat and loosens up the cold. I have always found it a reliable cough cure." Howard Gardner.

SHE REFUSED A MILLION FOR POORER MAN'S SAKE.

Now, Says Miss Atoppulis, Her Fiancee Won't Wed Her, and She Wants $10,000.

New York World.

A $10,000 breach of promise suit was begun in the City Court yesterday by Miss Great Atoppulis, seamstress, against George E. Etienne, connected with the Hotel LaFayette, at University place and Ninth street.

Miss Atoppulis charges that Etienne made ardent love for three years, got a marriage license and then backed down. There were several reasons why she thought she should be compensated, but among the foremost was this:

A year ago, when traveling in Germany, she met a millionaire or "something like that," and he asked her to become Mrs. Millionaire. She wrote to her American sweetheart informing him of the fact. She says he not only took the next boat across the Atlantic, but complained because it didn't go fast enough.

About a month ago, she returned. Etienne, she says, took out the license, and then suddenly had a revulsion of feeling.

WHIPPED THE LEOPARD.

But It Took a Troop of Baboons to Kill the Big Cat.

A vivid pen picture of a fight between a leopard and a troop of baboons is given in a German paper by P. Ritter, a sportsman and explorer in German West Africa. Leopards have a particular liking for baboon flesh, which is often used as bait to trap them.

"One afternoon," the hunter relates, "I was resting on the shady side of a big rock which formed the bank of a small stream. On the opposite side a troop of baboons came down chattering toward the water, a large male going cautiously in front, glancing and scenting around for danger. I remained immobile.

"A deep grunt assured the herd that all was well, and down the steep slope they came, last of all a female with two young, which the mother tenderly helped over the rough places. Suddenly a big leopard shot out from behind a bowlder and with one blow of his paw grabbed one of the young.

"The mother, with a roar of fury, threw herself upon the big cat. The others halted and with one accord clambered back to her assistance. The leopard had just settled the female and was about to make off with his prey when he found himself surrounded by the whole horde, which closed in upon him.

"He gave as good as he got, and two big baboons rolled down the slope apparently done for, but numbers told, and he was literally torn to pieces. It was a horribly fascinating sight, and I never regretted more having no camera with me than I did then."

THEY DIDN'T FIGHT.

It Was Only a Little Friendly Discussion That Excited Them.

Two Spaniards were conversing earnestly, then excitedly, at last angrily. The young American woman who passed them looked with frightened eyes toward her Spanish guide.

"What are they talking about, Senor Jose?" she asked timidly. "Do you think they will fight—or maybe kill?"

"Ah, no, Senorita Marie," replied Jose, smiling and showing his pretty teeth. "One man—that one, you see, senorita, with the long mustachios—he is saying, 'Me, I prefer much the collaire button which is steel,' and the other one—look, senorita—he is running his fingers through his hair now and his sombrero has a gold cord—he is saying, 'Ah, no, senor, the button which is of gold—si, senor, that is the button for me.'

"But as for myself, senorita, the bone collaire button—that I prefer above all the others.

"Do I not speak with good sense, senorita? Listen. If the button is of steel it will cut, if it is of gold one cannot afford to lose it, but if it is of bone it does not cut, and if it goes what matter? I have a dozen at home in my little top drawer."

"You speak with great good sense, Don Jose, but tell me—were the men really angry?"

"Oh, not at all, senorita. It is only our southern way of being interested in what we discuss. If it had been two Germans, senorita, or maybe two Englishman, you would never have noticed them."—Philadelphia Ledger.

HOME OF FALCONRY.

The Kirghiz Hunt Wolves and Foxes With Great Golden Eagles.

All wanderers are lovers of the chase, but for sheer love of sport and daring exploits the Kirghiz take the palm. Central Asia is the home of falconry, which was not introduced into Europe until the crusaders brought back falcons with them from their eastern wanderings. But imagine the ambition of the men who fly their birds at wolves and foxes instead of at quails and partridges! Not content with hunting game birds with small falcons, the Kirghiz capture and train the great golden eagles, with which they hunt such game as gazelles, foxes and even wolves.

A well mounted Kirghiz falconer, carrying on his wrist one of these magnificent birds, is a fine sight. The weight of the eagle is such that the owner requires a support for his wrist, and the hunters are usually to be seen with a little wooden bracket that supports the arm against the hip. The eagles are hooded, as all falcons are, but can be used only in winter, when they are hungry and keen. In summer they are fed on marmots and live a restful life, sitting in the sun in front of the tent doors.

When gazelles or wolves are the objects of the chase the eagles are aided by long, sleek greyhounds of a small breed, the dogs running in and pulling down the quarry when the eagles have sufficiently bewildered it.—Wide World Magazine.

NATURE'S PAINT BRUSH.

Colors, Shades and Tints That Cannot Be Reproduced by Man.

Nature paints in the most striking colors and shades and tints with a delicacy never achieved by the brush in the hands of the artist. The highest ambition of the manufacturer of paints is to produce colors which look like nature's. The yhave never succeeded. Grass has a green of its own. So has the leaf and so has the distant ocean. None of these has ever been reproduced and put in cans with a price label on them.

Winter apples now repose on the shelves of the paint chemists. Honor awaits the man who can combine colors to produce the tints of red of the Baldwin and Northern Spy. They come pretty near it, that is all. The same is true of the colors with which October first touches the maple leaf.

If all the paint grinding works in the world were multiplied ten thousand times they couldn't turn out pigment enough in a year to do what nature does in a change from season to season.

Nature's brush is busy everywhere all the time. In the life of a leaf it applies the brush day by day, following with its tints from budding time until it flutters from the branch. It touches the valleys and the hills, the growing grains, the flowering plants. Never is it idle.—New York World.

Legend of Holyrood Palace.

Holyrood palace, Edinburgh, Scotland, once a British royal residence, is the subject of a strange legend. Robert Louis Stevenson alludes to it in his little book on Edinburgh. "There is a silly story," he writes, "of a subterranean passage between the castle of Holyrood and a bold highland piper who volunteered to explore its windings. He made his entrance by the upper end, playing a strathspey. The curious footed it after him down the street, following his descent by the sound of the chanter from below, until all of a sudden, about the level of St. Giles', the music came abruptly to an end and the people in the street stood at fault with hands uplifted. Whether he was choked with gases or perished in a quag or was removed bodily by the evil one remains a point of doubt, but the piper has never again been seen or heard of from that day to this."

National Shortsightedness.

"In this country," said the sociologist, "everything possible is done to discourage people from marrying."

"How so?" inquired one of the listeners.

"You have to buy the marriage license, fee the preacher, the boys give you what they call a 'shivaree,' your friends throw old shoes at you, the newspapers print caricatures of you, life insurance agents hound you, you bump right up against the cost of living, and if you find you've made a mistake you have to go to no end of trouble to get a divorce."—Chicago Tribune.

His Strong Point.

"This is a pretty bad report card," said the father of the young hopeful as he looked over the teacher's figures. "You seem to be 'poor' in pretty much everything."

"That's 'cause teacher only puts down th' studies I ain't good in. I ought to have 'excellent' in one thing."

"And what's that?" hopefully inquired the father.

"Fightin'. I can lick any boy in th' class!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Shop.

"Take your arm away, sir!" sharply exclaimed the indignant maiden.

"So," said the young editor musingly, "an unexpected accident, we regret to say, prevents our going to press."—Chicago Tribune.

Since war is dependent not upon politicians but financiers, Mr. Carnegie seems to have lighted happily upon the one solution of the peace problem: That of making the peace tribunal such a strong financial competitor of the war treasury as that it will ultimately force the latter into dissolution.

Oil is still one of the greatest agencies in the world for shedding light in dark places; at any rate the police justice of Raleigh seems to have been in the dark as to what trust competition is until the Standard Oil lights began to blaze in his court. Or is it that the lights were too glaring for the justice to see his way out?

"Vote against commission form of government for Greensboro and keep on growing." So read the heading of a circular distributed yesterday in connection with the campaign for and against the new charter with its provision for government by commission. The authors of the circular neglected to state which of the numerous cities that have adopted the commission form have stopped growing. If they had done that their circular would have had more value as a means of enlightenment for the voters.

Tuesday in the Senate Senator Boyden, of Rowan, was the only member who voted against the proposed income tax amendment to the Constitution. But no one will think the less of him for standing firm for his first conviction, as it is always wholesome and significant of a stable order of things to see men slow to make changes in the foundation upon which the government rests. However, it seems to be the general consensus of opinion, at least in this State, that such an amendment is greatly needed, in that it will guarantee a more just and equitable levying and collection of taxes.

The News and Observer seems inclined to take us seriously in our intended humor regarding Raleigh and the presence there of the new State capitol. We intended to convey the idea that a million dollar building would be of such size, stateliness, and architectural beauty as to be a little lonesome in Raleigh, but would not attempt to dispute the fact that the present capitol is unsurpassed in simplicity and unassuming dignity of design and architecture. Nevertheless, in the matter of size there are other buildings even in the vicinity of the old structure that comport very well with it.

There have been many so-called cotton pickers invented, but not one has so far been found satisfactory, as they have not been able to pick the cotton clean of dead leaves and cuckle burrs. But there has recently come under our observation an invention that will certainly enable the farmer materially to increase his acreage, whether he succeeds or not in getting it all harvested. This machine is the invention of Mr. J. B. Farrar, of Wilmington, and is being already used with satisfaction and success in eastern North Carolina. It is drawn by two horses and both chops and cultivates the cotton, doing the work of 15 or 20 average hands. With this mechanism a farmer with a large plantation should have no trouble in placing it in cultivation and of making a fortune in a few seasons, provided he can get pickers and anywhere near the present price for his cotton.

THE MIDNIGHT FLOWER.

Last Thursday was the 102nd anniversary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe, the most remarkable poetic genius in the history of the South and in many respects of America or the world. And yet it is observed that even in the city where he wrought and died but one single hand,and that unknown, paused from the turbid course of this modern, intensive, and unimaginative anomaly which we call civilization, to do so much as drop a flower on his neglected grave. With that lone flower the solitary visitor left a note, which was found by a minister and read on Sunday morning before his congregation in Baltimore. The note began: "This one lone flower to the memory of Edgar Allan Poe—at midnight on his birthday. It is all that Baltimore, who can afford residences of magnificence and splendor for her shopkeepers, can afford in memory of the divine and eternal spirit she has produced. Long may his memory live in other nations—he is already forgot in his home

The missive continued in a strain of ironical rebuke to "magnificent Baltimore, magnaniomous Baltimore," whose "silken-gouned admirers" "smile adoringly over tea cups" at his immortal verse, but who "begrudge a penny for a flower to adorn his grave."

We stop the wheels of industry and leave the tumult of the mart to do honor to the warrior and the man whose pen was plied in the drafting of our constitutions and our laws, but the pen which moved responsive to the rhythm and cadence of the Muse's string, and which has ever been more powerful than sword or tongue or e'en the throne of empire is but a thing that bears a tag, a number, and a name unhonored save by the cloistered few who have kept their souls untarnished by the greed of gold.

We are a nation of idolaters and worship at the shrine of action. Inspiration thrills only at the sight of speed and the news of a sharp bargain driven. A genius is the man who can thread a city or state with steel rails and electric wires or put in motion the greatest number of looms and spindles; while he who feels within the throbbing pulse of worlds unborn and hears the music and feels the passion of the centuries must quench the fire of genius and write an ell of doggerel for so much per diem, because the paper must come out on the hour and because men demand to feed their minds very much as they do their bellies—with food that can be masticated with the least amount of trouble and in the shortest time. And the dead poet who lives in deeds within the hearts of the few, is without public meed of homage because the few, being without wealth, have not enough influence to popularize the event.

But the spirit of the South's greatest poet, Edgar Allan Poe, despite his faults, and notwithstanding the neglect of the many, still lives; and some day, when the pendulum shall swing back to a saner civilization and a normal and more wholesome refinement and sensibility, then where one flower was left at midnight to guard his memory, will be dropped a thousand; and wherever there is a schoolhouse in this sunny homeland of his, at least one hour shall be set apart on the 19th of January for the study of his awe-inspiring, soul-thrilling, weird and entrancing "The Raven," or the rhythmically beautiful and wonderfully delightful poem, "The Bells," or others of his matchless productions in both verse and prose.

Let us indeed forget Poe's faults: they were born of the despair of a tumultuous and restless genius and of a soul meant for other worlds than this, where in his wild and hopeless search for sympathetic insight and spiritual companionship he lost sight of the wisdom and purpose of Divinity in giving him to earth. But who can judge that, after all, Poe did not accomplish his mission? Many a man has been swallowed up in wretchedness and woe, who yet was not their willing slave. It was not out of Poe's human passions that he wrote, but from a soul untutored, fettered, and helpless in its pitiable loneliness against the fearful odds of fate. His genius was too rare, his love of truth and honor too deep and abiding, his passionate fondness for the friends who remained true even when the pangs of poverty and disgrace were about to destroy him, his hatred for cant, hypocrisy, and the dross and tinsel of those who bought honors with ill-earned gold, his love of children, and his sentient and hearty appreciation of true worth and nobility are so manifest that those who refuse to honor him for what he was, despite the evils he knew not the power to overcome, shall bring only dishonor to themselves.

OPPOSE NEW COUNTY.

Chamber of Commerce Directors Request Legislature to Refuse to Dismember Old Guilford.

At yesterday's meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce the following resolution was adopted:

Be it resolved by the Board of Directors of the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce.

That we wish to enter our most emphatic protest against the proposed dismemberment of Guilford county by the creation of Piedmont county out of a part thereof.

We can see no necessity or reasonable convenience to any part of the people of the county that would call for such action. Guilford county is a rectangle twenty four by twenty eight miles with the present court house less than a quarter of a mile from the exact geographical center of the county. Railroads radiate in six different directions from the county seat, practically covering the entire county, while improved county highways lead to every community. The financial affairs of the county are in excellent shape, the schools are conducted along broad and progressive lines and the people are prosperous, contented and homogeneous; to say nothing of the regret upon sentimental grounds that must come to every citizen of the grand old county upon contemplating its proposed division after a century of noble and historic achievement.

For these reasons we respectfully request our representatives in the General Assembly to use every legitimate means to defeat the proposed division, and further request the General Assembly as a whole not to dismember the county which leads the state along many lines and has during the last ten years shown a growth that is alike the wonder and the admiration of all.

MARTINE WINS

Is Elected Senator To Succeed John Kean—A Great Victory For Woodrow Wilson.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 25.—Governor Woodrow Wilson scored his first complete victory in his contest against the old Democratic organization of New Jersey today by the election of James E. Martine, of Plainfield, as United States senator to succeed John Kean, Republican. Mr. Martine's election was opposed by former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., long recognized as the leader of Jersey Democracy. Mr. Martine, a Democrat, will take his place in the Senate on March 4.

Mr. Martin's election was assured yesterday by Smith's withdrawal.

The House and Senate met in joint session today at noon and the balloting was quickly over, the result as announced being 47 votes for Martine out of a total of 79.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together, and until the last few years was ssupposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

VALUABLE GIFT OF AFTER SCHOOL CLUB

Parent Organization Presents Home and School Council of Greensboro With Collection of Valuable Books—Covers a Variety of Subjects of Especial Interest to Council.

The After School Club of America has most generously presented an admirable collection of books to the Home & School Council of Greensboro.

The volumes cover a variety of subjects and lines of important effort in child training and will be of incalculable help in the work of the council.

Among the number are to be found:

"The Training of the Human Plant," by Luther Burbank.

"Laggards in Our Schools," by Leonard P. Ayers.

"Mind in the Making," by Edgar James Swift.

"On the Training of Parents," by Ernest H. Abbott.

"How to Tell Stories to Children," and "Stories to Tell to Children," by Sara Cone Bryant.

"Home School and Vacation," by Annie Winsor Allen.

"The Education of the Child," by Ellen Key.

"Harper's Electricity Book for Boys," by Joseph H. Adams.

"Education by Plays and Games," by Geo. Ellsworth Johnson.

"The Kindergarten in the Home," by Carrie S. Newman.

"In the Child's World," by Emilie Poulsson.

"Some Silent Teachers," by Elizabeth Harrison.

"Love & Law in Child Training," by Emilie Poulsson.

"Home and School United in Widening Circles of Inspiration and Service," by Mary Van Nieber Grice.

Such valuable and suggestive books as these should be found in the homes of all thoughtful, earnest parents who desire to make the most of their children. They open up to enquiring parents and teachers the wisdom of the great authorities in the child world, dealing as they do with the discussions of children's rights, school life, occupations, amusements, sensible handling of questions and methods of discipline, government, character training, etc. Such a handsome gift as this the After School Club is only another evidence that it stands ready to help in every line of child uplift.

Dyke, Edward Bok, of the Ladies' Home Journal; Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University; Lyman Abbott. These and a score of other specialists chose the choicest literature of all countries and of all time, and it appears in a graded uniform series, beautiful of manufacture.

Among the other benefits and advantages to which membership in the After School Club entitles one are the following:

"The Mothers Counsel," of which Mrs. Mary V. Grice is director. Mrs. Grice was for a long time an active member of the National Congress of Mothers, and is now president of the League of Home and School Associations in Philadelphia. Mrs. Grice in personal letters holds expert counsel with mothers and teachers on all problems of child life.

A book entitled "The Mother's Book" on every phase of home life, written by Mrs. Annie Winsor Allen, is the only book of the kind ever published and the first attempt to help parents realize by scientific methods the ambitions they have for their children. Another department, the circulating library, which contains all important volumes on child culture, psychology, crafts and sports, etc., shows the bigness and practical utility of the plan of the After School Club.

Monographs, giving the result of the researches made by nearly all the organizations working today in the interest of child culture and childhood activities.

A system of correspondence with "Uncle Nat," Mr. Nathaniel M. Dawson, a renowned child lover of the East, who gives his whole time exclusively to the boys and girls of the After School Club, his aim being to relieve school strain and to afford wholesome fun, recreation and inspiration to children and youth.

Another department is important from the commercial as well as educational standpoint. This is a guaranteed discount of fifteen to fifty per cent on all books and publications in harmony with the After School Club movement.

REMARKABLE RECORD

Flesh-forming Food That Succeeds Nearly Every Time.

A man or woman might as well starve outright as to take food into the stomach and not have it assimilated, yet in Greensboro as well as in every other town and city, there are many people who are thin, pale and seem underfed, simply because the food they eat is not assimilated, and fails to make good blood and firm flesh.

Samose, the wonderful fleshforming food, taken before or after meals, mingles with the food, so that it is assimilated by the system and makes rich blood and pleasing plumpness. No one can use it for a week or ten days without a noticeable gain in weight. Statistics show that out of every one hundred people who commence the use of Samose, 98 will find a full gain in weight and restoration of health and strength.

Anyone who is thin, weak, scrawny and emaciated can put 50c on deposit with Howard Gardner and take home a box of Samose. If the treatment does not give a noticeable increase in good, firm flesh and restore strength and health, he will return the money without any questions.

NEW YORK SCARED HIM; HE'LL SAIL BACK HOME.

Young Immigrant Who Brought $3,500 to Buy Farm Will Return to Germany.

New York World.

Julius Lorenzen, thirty-five years old, spent one day in New York, rode once in the subway and then pathetically begged to be taken back to Ellis Island and allowed to return to Europe.

Lorenzen arrived on Sunday on the Hamburg-American liner Moltke, and with other immigrants was taken to Ellis Island. When questioned about his finances he produced 15,900 francs, or about $3,500. He said he was the son of a farmer at Klippleff, Northern Germany, and had come to this country to buy a farm.

Fearing that if he went ashore unattended with so much money he might be robbed, the authorities detained him temporarily and later placed him in the care of Inspector Green, of the Information Bureau.

Lorenzen insisted on visiting a friend who lived uptown. When the man detailed to accompany him took him up Broadway the young farmer was visibly agitated. In the subway he became panic-stricken and begged his companion to take him back to Ellis Island. There he said to the German interpreter:

"This country is too big for me. I'm scared. If you'll let me go back to Germany I'll pay my own way."

Home protection is true wisdom. Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve ought to be in every home for its quick relief and prevention of two dangerous diseases and the more common ailments such as Colds, Catarrh, Burns and Chaps.

A Bit Too Early.

First Clerk—Isn't it fine the way the shoppers are coming in? I never knew them to do much buying so early.

Second Clerk—It's fine, all right with one exception.

"What is that?"

Great Idea.

Stage Villain—How's that?

Didn't Awe Him.

The members of a Greek letter fraternity from a southern university were being shown through the library of congress. They were apparently stricken dumb with admiration of the beauties of the building. But the atmosphere of awe was dissipated when one of the party, a red headed youth, exclaimed fervently:

"Gee, fellows! Wouldn't this make a dandy frat house?"—St. Louis Republic.

The Old Problem.

"This magazine looks rather the worse for wear."

"Yes; it's the one I sometimes lend to the servant on Sundays."

No Cause For Worry.

HE PUNISHED GRANT.

The Cadet Was Guilty of Dismounting Without Leave.

While a student at West Point U. S. Grant excelled in mathematics and horsemanship. He jumped his horse over a bar five feet six inches high, which made a record for the academy and a close second to the highest jump ever recorded in America. He received little honor for some of his efforts, however, notably in the case recalled by Nicholas Smith in "Grant, the Man of Mystery." But perhaps the humor of it reconciled him.

The riding master was one Hershberger, "an amusing sort of tyrant," and on one occasion, whether seriously or as a joke, he determined to "take down" the young cadet.

At the exercise Grant was mounted on a powerful but vicious brute that the cadets fought shy of and was put at leaping the bar.

The bar was placed higher and higher as he came round the ring till it passed the record. The stubborn rider would not say "enough," but the horse was disposed to shy and refuse to make the leap.

Grant gritted his teeth and spurred at it, but just as the horse gathered for the spring his swelling body burst the girth, and the rider and saddle tumbled into the ring.

Half stunned, Grant gathered himself up from the dust only to hear the "strident, cynical voice" of Hershberger calling out:

"Cadet Grant, six demerits for dismounting without leave!"

The Rajahs of Bustar.

The rajahs of Bustar are hybrid rajputs, claiming to be of the family of the moon, and have reigned in Bustar for between five and six hundred years. The family bears the name of Rathputty, and every year the rajah has to sit on the rath at the festival of the Dusseerah wearing the jewels of the goddess Dunteshwarre, the tutelary goddess of the state, which are brought from Dantawara temple for the purpose.

"Save for the jewels he is clad only in wreaths of flowers," says a writer in the Wide World, "and when we saw him he looked very solemn—almost ashamed of himself—as he passed us.

"In connection with this ceremony there used to be a brutal custom of dragging the rath, a huge sort of juggernaut car weighing many tons, over the bodies of live buffaloes, often only partly killing them.

"This horrible practice was stopped by British officials."

Indispensable.

Three camels presented themselves at the dock where the ark was tied up, whereas but two animals of a kind had been called for.

"One of you fellows will have to step aside!" shouted Noah very peremptorily.

But the three ships of the desert smiled knowingly.

"I," said the first of them, "am the camel which shall pass through the eye of a needle sooner than a rich man shall enter the kingdom of heaven."

"I," said the second, "am the camel which so many people swallow while straining at a gnat."

"And I," said the third and last, "am the camel whose back was broken by the last straw."

Whereupon Noah, perceiving that posterity could ill spare any of these and would be lost for illustrations without them, graciously made an exception in their favor.—Puck.

A Famous Vine.

In the Cumberland Lodge portion of the royal gardens at Windsor there is a vine, known all over England as the Cumberland Lodge vine, which is a shoot of a still older vine which grows at Hampton Court, but the shoot has far outdistanced its parent in dimensions and productiveness. In England grapes are generally grown under glass, and the Cumberland Lodge vine has a great glass structure, 120 feet long by 20 wide, all to itself. Growing with astonishing luxuriance, the vine spreads itself over a roof area of 2,400 square feet and bears annually a crop of approximately a thousand huge bunches of the finest flavored grapes. These grapes are frequently found on the royal table, and the subject who is presented with a basket of them considers himself highly favored. The shoot from which the great vine has grown was planted in 1775.

Cliff of Natural Glass.

A cliff of natural glass can be seen in Yellowstone park. It is half a mile long and from 150 to 290 feet high, the material of which it consists being as good glass as that artificially manufactured. The dense glass which forms the base is from seventy-five to a hundred feet thick, while the upper portion, having suffered and survived many ages of wind and rain, has naturally worn much thinner. Of course the color of the cliff is not that of natural glass—transparent and white—but is mostly black and in some places mottled and streaked with brownish red and shades of olive green and brown.

SLEEPLESSNESS

Its Cause and Remedy.

Do you know what it is to lie awake nights, fidgety, restless, tossing about, counting 100 backwards, or sheep jumping over a fence, all in a vain endeavor to lose yourself in slumberland and get the rest which you so much need.

No one, unless they have ben troubled with insomnia, can begin to realize it's horrors and how wearing it is.

In nine cases out of ten it is simply a case of overworked nerves or derangement of the digestive system. Thousands of such cases are being cured by Vinol. As proof we quote from a letter recently received from Marion, Ind.

"I could not sleep nights, was rundown, nervous, had no appetite and was all discouraged. Vinol made me well after all other remedies had failed. I sleep splendidly, and have gained in strength." Mrs. L. E. Heinlein. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We ask every person who suffers from sleeplessness or who is nervous or rundown to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not help them. Vinol contains no drugs or oil, and agrees with everyone. Fariss-Klutz Drug Co., Greensboro, N. C.

LARGEST SAFE IN THE WORLD

The United States Government is now in possession of the largest and finest safe in the world. It is located deep underground below the United States treasury building at Washington, and in this huge strong box it is the intention to keep in storage at all times not less than $500,000,000 in currency. Of course, this new governmental depository of wealth is not a "safe" in the ordinary interpretation of the word, but rather a vault nearly 54 feet in length, close to 20 feet wide and about 16 feet in height.

The exterior walls of the new vault are of the heaviest steel construction and the door and the portholes providing for ventilation are closed by heavy steel doors fitted with the latest approved locks of the heaviset and most intricate construction, but the main safeguard for this subterranean wealth lies in an electric protective system that cost $9,000, and which "enmeshes the entire vault in a close-drawn net-work of electric wires—more than seventeen miles of wire in the aggregate—which suonds alarms at any interference. This system is tested every fifteen minutes day and night. The only means of reaching the new vault is by a secret elevator, guarded by treasury watchmen.—Popular Mechanics.

THE LOG SCHOOL HOUSE

"Grandma" Writes Reminiscently of the Olden Times.

Away back in the "70's" the writer's memory takes her to the old log school house in which she acquired the earliest part of her education. The room was a square of about 18 or 20 feet, with the fireplace occupying nearly one end of the room, the windows one end and side being a log left out, with a long plank for shutters.

The teacher was a tall, robust, specimen of humanity, well versed in the knowledge of that day, and held a gentle, but firm sway over his students. They were of both sexes, but remained apart at noon, the boys playing ball, the girls jumping the rope or other amusements. The studies ranged from A B C to Latin and other languages. Many of the scholars had to walk 2 and 3 miles, and in bitter cold weather suffered much before there could be a fire made.

Fire was kept by wrapping a chunk of wood and coals in the ashes, and if that died out before morning, one of the boys was sent to a neighbor's house for fire. Matches were unknown then. How different now! We have better houses, better teachers, better equipments in many ways, made so with the help of the betterment association, and some more public spirited citizens.

But from this rough structure there went out in the world some noted men and good women, some of whom graduated at a nearby college. Among the men were doctors, lawyers, clerks of county and superior courts, etc. From one family, there arose a judge, a noted educator, and one who held a position next to our state executive a few years since.

GRANDMA.

Lovill-Kirkman.

Dr. Robert J. Lovill and Miss Lucile Kirkman, both of Siler City, were married Tuesday afternoon in this city, the ceremony being performed by Rev. E. B. Craven, of Siler City. After the ceremony the bride and groom left on a trip north.

Throne Jewels.

In the "gold pantry" at Windsor castle, one of England's chief royal palaces, is the gold tiger's head taken from Tippo Sahib's throne in 1789. It is lief size, and the teeth and eyes are of rock crystal. Another relic captured at the same time is the jeweled bird called the uma, shaped like a pigeon, with a peacock tail. The feathers blaze with precious stones, and a great emerald hangs from its breast. According to an old Indian legend whoever owns this bird will rule India.

It Depends.

Bill—They tell me that a goat eats twelve times its weight in a year.

Jill—Does that represent much food, do you suppose?

"Well, it all depends whether what the goat eats happens to be paper covered novels or lead pipe!—Yonkers Statesman.

An Exception.

"Emerson says there is always a best way of doing everything."

"Is there? I wonder if he ever found a best way of wearing a pair of shoes that were about a size too small."—Chicago Record-Herald.

No Chance.

"Do you always do a little more than is expected of you?"

"No; my boss always expects a little more than you can do."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Sincerity and pure truth in what age soever find their opportunity and advantage.—Montague.
